

Getting un-stuck.

Phones do confusing things sometimes. Almost nothing is broken — and almost everything is fixed by one of these. You really can't hurt it by tapping.

THE BASICS When in doubt, try these

These four moves get you out of almost anything. Start at the top.

1

Go back to the start screen

Press the Home button — or swipe up slowly from the very bottom.

2

A black screen is just asleep

It isn't broken. Press the side button once to wake it.

3

If it's stuck, wait a moment

Many freezes clear on their own. Don't tap quickly — give it a few seconds.

4

Still stuck? Turn it off and on

Hold the side button until you can slide to power off. (Newer phones: side + a volume button.)

You really can't break it by tapping. When something looks wrong, go back to the start screen — and it's always okay to ask.

Common surprises.

DON'T WORRY Each has a simple fix

If the phone does one of these, here's the calm fix.

Nothing here is broken.

An app won't respond.

Go back to the start screen, then tap it again to reopen.

The screen turned sideways.

Turn the phone upright; it usually flips back on its own.

Everything looks too big.

You zoomed by accident. Double-tap with three fingers to undo it.

A pop-up or ad appeared.

Don't tap inside it. Go to the start screen and it's gone.

The keyboard is in the way.

Tap "Done," or tap an empty part of the screen, to hide it.

A call started by mistake.

Tap the big red button to hang up.

Still stuck after going home and restarting? That's when to ask — you've already done the right things.
